BOARD

Dear Quintilian Parents,

On Wednesday night the Board held a strategy session with our wonderful staff. This was a follow up to a similar session held last year. Whilst the Board and staff are always looking for ways to improve our school environment, these sessions allow us to take stock of existing strategies and identify priorities for our school in the four core areas of Student Wellbeing, Staff Wellbeing, Learning Environment and School Community. Themes coming out of the brainstorming session included investigating the opportunity for further specialist teachers, ways to continue to improve student resilience and mindfulness, as well as enclosing all or part of our under-croft area where we hold our bi-annual pantomime. As the parent body for our school, we are always open to engaging with our families to ensure we truly represent the views of our community. Please feel free to approach any of the Board members at our school events, or if you would prefer, you can send me an email richard_s@inet.net.au.

Those who have been around the school in the past two weeks would agree that the children's response to the new fort has been euphoric. For those interested, the school has put up the funds for the cost of this addition to our infrastructure, which will be reimbursed by targeted fundraising over a 5 - 7 year period. We have already started this process from funds raised last year. I view this as our legacy to the school that our children will enjoy in the meantime.

Lastly, you will read in this newsletter an article from Sally Thompson, a Quintilian Alumni, who has kindly shared her Quintilian memories with us. Sally's story is the result of an initiative the Board commenced late last year, to reach out to past students in the hope of running a series of stories in the School's monthly newsletter. We have asked the alumni to answer the questions in a manner that will assist current students to connect with the School's history as well as potentially helping map a career pathway for some of the older students.

For those who are going, I look forward to catching up with you at Rotto (is Roger Federer still there?).

PRINCIPAL

Dear Parents,

I have received an extraordinary amount of positive feedback about our new fort from our staff, parents and most importantly our students. The design process commenced approximately twelve months ago and the builders worked into the night and on weekends during the recent school holiday break to have the fort ready for day one of Term 2. There is still a spiral/turbo slide to be installed and we plan to add this towards the end of May.

I wish to inform parents that the fort has been architect designed, engineer certified and the plans were sent to WA Kidsafe for approval prior to construction. I have now asked WA Kidsafe to visit the school to see the final construction and to provide feedback on any further safety measures we need to put in place.

I have received some feedback from parents about a few safety concerns they have with particular areas of the fort and I will be raising these with WA Kidsafe. We will be enclosing the bridge walkway from the main fort to the turret area with wood and adding wood to the turret platform, which currently has netting.

This term we have an amazing range of activities and clubs operating before and after school and your children will enjoy the variety.

I hope to see you at our Rottnest Family Weekend and I am confident that we will have superb weather this year.

Principal

Sally Thompson

Associate Professor, Civil & Environmental Engineering, Berkeley University, USA.

Quintilian Alumni Sally Thompson at a field site in Yosemite National Park.

When did you graduate from Quintilian?

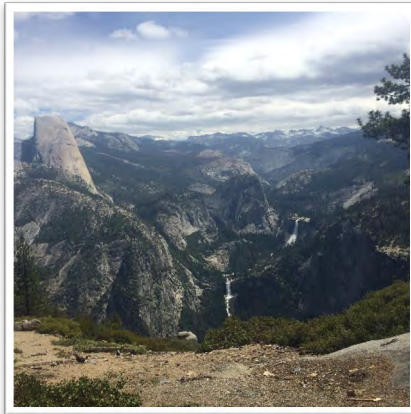

At the end of Year 3 - 1988!

Where do you live now?

Berkeley, California. That's about 10 km away from San Francisco City - when I take the dog walking I stare straight out to the Pacific Ocean through the Golden Gate Bridge. That view still makes me pinch myself!

What do you do in your profession?

There are 2 parts of my profession - on the one hand I'm a "Professor" at a university here in Berkeley. With that hat on, I do research, teaching and work in the administration of my academic department and the university. The other part of my profession is that I'm an "environmental engineer" - specifically a hydrologist. Environmental engineers work to provide people with things like clean water and sanitation, clean air and waste disposal. Hydrologists study the water cycle and try to make predictions about what water will do - are we at risk of floods or droughts? will there be enough water to keep plants and water-living animals alive? is there enough water in a river to use it to e.g. make electricity? is there a risk of chemicals getting into water supplies? These are the kinds of questions that hydrologists try to answer. So most days I'm teaching, chatting to students, marking tests and sitting on committees -- but the stuff I'm thinking about is water in the environment.

Yosemite National Park, USA.

How did you end up becoming an Associate Professor in Civil and Environmental Engineering?

By accident! I was originally an engineer in Perth, and decided to do a PhD to make my company realize that they needed to give me more interesting work! As I was figuring out where to do that PhD, a friend sent me an advertisement for a scholarship called the General Sir John Monash Award, which would allow me to study overseas. I applied, got the scholarship, and started research at Duke University in North Carolina. (If you know where New York city is - head south, past Washington DC, and you'll get to the state of North Carolina.

No one in Australia had any idea where I was going when I went there!). In a PhD you mostly do scientific research, and it turns out that I'm pretty good at that and enjoy it a lot, so by the end of my studies I was getting a lot of encouragement to look for a job in a university. I hoped to move back to Australia and actually had taken a job at a university in Sydney when a position opened up at Berkeley - which is the best university in the US to do environmental engineering work. I never expected they'd hire me - but they did! - and I've been here for 6 years now. The people I get to work with here at Berkeley are amazing - I still can't believe how fortunate I am to be able to do my work in this community of thinkers and doers.

Looking out across the SF Bay to the Golden Gate Bridge from the Berkeley campus. The pointy building at the front of the image is the Berkeley Campanile (bell tower). I think its the third highest belltower in the world (sorry Richard Court!). The students here make a joke to unsuspecting tourists that in the event of a major earthquake it is designed to fall over and slide down the hill towards the bay, providing a convenient means of escape for anyone who can clamber onto it. I'm yet to see a tourist believe this story, but I always enjoy overhearing it.

What makes you excited about going to work each day?

Some days I know we're going to do something really fun and thought provoking in class. Some days I know I'm going to learn something really new and exciting from our research. Some days there's cake in the coffee room (I can get pretty excited about cake). Not every day, but some days, work involves wading through a pristine river, camping in the mountains or spending a day in a vineyard in the Napa Valley as we start to measure what's going on with water in those places. Those days are definitely exciting (especially when there's a bear or mountain lion in the area).

Just about every day I'm excited to spend time with the students who do their research with me. They're positive, diverse, brilliant and genuinely good people. They are the absolute best thing about my job.

What are some of your fondest memories of Quintilian?

When we got the first bus! It was a surprise for all the kids - we drove to Shenton Lake for an outing. The bus had a "new car" smell and the seats were all soft and clean. I'm sure they didn't stay that way for long. Once we had the bus we went out for at least one excursion every week. I've still got a book of photos (somewhere) that we made after a Pre-Primary visit to a farm. The teachers must have been exhausted, but the kids were exhilarated.

When we got to start learning science - we started by learning about electricity. I felt so grown up learning how the electric circuit we had worked to turn a light globe on and off. We were so excited to start learning that stuff.

Some days my work involves wading through a pristine river, camping in the mountains or spending a day in a vineyard in the Napa Valley as we start to measure what's going on with water in those places. Those days are definitely exciting (especially when there's a bear or mountain lion in the area).

Bush dances with the Mucky Duck bush band. But I think every kid at school in Perth in the 1980s probably has fond memories of a bush dance with the Mucky Duck bush band, those guys got around!

Not a memory, but one of the best things I have taken with me from Quintilian is the friendship of my Pre-Primary and Year 1 teacher, Yvonne Moore. I just saw Yvonne at my brother's wedding - she still hangs out with my mum and we catch up when I get back to Perth. She's a beacon of warmth and goodness, and how amazing that she's still in our lives after more than 20 years

What would you say to children learning at Quintilian today?

Quintilian makes learning fun. Hold onto that fun and you'll be enjoying yourself for your whole life.
